II. Award Track Selection

The selection committee will consider your materials and make its decision according to one of the five "tracks" listed. The intent of the awards is to highlight a recent achievement or successful activity in the classroom or other venues of teaching and learning.

Select one (1) of the following:

- High impact learning activity with students
(e.g., UG lab, field trip, internship, learner-driven activity, clinical activity)
- Creative redesign of a course
(e.g., open classroom, UDL, OER, TBL)
- Program or curriculum transformation
- Interdisciplinary or collaborative programming/activity
- Innovative pedagogical technique

III. Summary of Activity/Achievement

In this space provide a brief summary of the activity or achievement forming the basis of your application. Additional details should be provided in your supporting materials. Please limit to the space provided.

IV. Statement of Teaching Philosophy

In the space below (approx. 400–700 words), provide statement/summary of your “teaching philosophy.” This should speak to your overall approach to teaching, but it should be clear to the review committee how the specific activity or achievement of this award application fits into your philosophy.

V. Sharing with Your Colleagues

Please describe how you could share your expertise in teaching with the college community during the 2023-2024 academic year.

VI. Other Materials and Submission Instructions

Please provide the following supporting materials:

1. Documentation in support of your application within the chosen “track”
2. Other evidence of support that may include, but is not limited to, peer and/or student evaluations, teaching observations, program assessment documentation, external recognition, letters of support (no more than 3)
3. Curriculum vitae

The guidance for the documentation and evidence is intentionally flexible to allow you to provide whichever materials you think best support of your application. Bear in mind the fairly narrow scope of the award in your preparations (i.e., all aspects of your teaching needn't be examined).

Applications may include links to web-based material along with instructions for how to view them.

Submission Deadline
Tuesday, March 21, 2023 (11 p.m.)

Submit this application form, along with all supporting materials, using the Dropbox File Request link specific to this award. Any standard file format is acceptable, but PDFs are preferred when possible.

E-mailed materials will not be accepted; use the Dropbox link.
